Islamic militants bomb Israelis

Double-bombing tactic claims lives of servicemen, rescuers

BEIT LID JUNCTION, Israel - A suicide mission by Islamic militants near a snack bar mobbed with soldiers killed 18 Israelis and wounded about 60 Sunday with a gruesome new tactic - igniting a small blast and ambushing would-be rescuers with a second major explosion.

The result was a hammer blow to the Israel-PLO peace treaty, already reeling from an unprecedented series of attacks inside Israel.

President Ezer Weizman proposed that Israel stop the peace talks for an extended review before expanding Palestinian self-rule into the West Bank. The president has little power but is looked to as an indicator of the national mood in times of crisis.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin convened an emergency Cabinet session Sunday evening to determine the government's response.

The first step was a complete closure of the occupied territories, blocking the movement of all Palestinians into Israel. It has been the response after each similar attack and has kept tens of thousands of Palestinians away from jobs in Israel.

Rabin underscored the deepening concern about such carnage by making his first personal inspection tour of a suicide bombing site. "There is no doubt in my mind that this action now is another attempt by the extreme Islamic terror groups to achieve their dual goal of killing Israelis and halting the peace process," he said.

Hecklers at the scene shouted, "How much longer?" while he toured the devastated site surrounded by jittery bodyguards. Smaller demonstrations were held at the site later in the night and outside government offices.

The radical Islamic Jihad organization issued leaflets in both Gaza and in Damascus, Syria, claiming responsibility for the double-barreled suicide mission.

The Gaza statement said the attack was to avenge the death of Hani Abed, a leader of the military wing whose death was blamed on Israel, and the killing of three Palestinian police shot by Israeli troops earlier this month.

The two suicide attackers were identified as Salah Shahr, 25, from Rafah and Anwar Sukkar, 23, from Gaza City, whose father is a Palestinian traffic policeman.

Outside his house, Islamic activists chanted "Death to America and Israel" and said the bomber would be rewarded in paradise. Clearly distraught relatives cried, spat at the Islamic Jihad members and cursed them as "dogs." One threw a flower pot that narrowly missed people in the crowd.

Most of the 18 Israelis killed and 62 wounded in Sunday's attack were soldiers, although the dead included at least one elderly civilian man.

The brunt of the explosion was taken by a single army company, one of a special unit deployed to guard bus stops, especially on Sundays when they are crowded with troops returning from weekend furloughs.

Kit bags, jackets and the red berets of the elite paratrooper unit, many of them blood-stained, lay scattered among the broken glass and other debris after the blast. Religious medical teams combed the ground and the trees for scattered bits of flesh, since Jewish law requires all body parts to be buried.

"There was a huge explosion. We came outside and saw everything was charred. As I moved toward the snack bar, I saw body parts, heads, arms, a God-awful scene," said eyewitness Haim Hershkovitz.

Rains delay search efforts

Physical, psychological aftershocks roll through Kobe

David Thurber
The Associated Press

KOBE, Japan - Bone-chilling rain Sunday grounded relief flights, delayed search operations and bred fears of disease among survivors of Japan's deadliest quake in more than 70 years. The death toll neared 5,000.

Resentment and frustration appeared to grow among thousands of survivors. Many showed signs of deep psychological scars, while others struggled to get by without basic services.

"We just need a bathroom," Mun Wah Soon, a Korean, said as she pattered about the tent she and her husband share with about 20 others. "There's no water. We can't wash anything."

Five days after the 7.2-magnitude quake, police put the death toll at 4,936, with 171 people still missing. Nearly 26,000 have been injured.

Doug Copp of the San Francisco-based American Rescue Team said there was a "good possibility" more survivors could be found.

A strong aftershock shook Kobe overnight. There were no reports of damage or injury. The aftershock measured 4 on the Japanese 7-point scale. Tuesday's quake measured 7 on that scale, which cannot be converted to the standard international scale.

Underscoring the danger still facing this once-vibrant port city, three people were trapped Sunday when a quake-damaged building collapsed, blocking the entrance to their home. Rescuers saved them.

The search for 30 people missing in nearby Nishinomiya had to be called off for fear of mudslides caused by the rain.

The rain also made conditions even more miserable for nearly 300,000 people left homeless by the quake. Almost 52,000 buildings, many of them homes, were damaged or destroyed.

Virtually all of Kobe's 1.4 million residents lack natural gas for heat, and the Osaka Gas Co. said restoring service could take six weeks. More than half the city's households still lack running water.

The bad weather heightened fears of disease, especially influenza.

Signs of emotional stress are also emerging, causing a breakdown in the social order for which Japanese society is renowned.

For the first time, merchants are complaining about theft, and on Sunday many organized a neighborhood watch to guard against night pilferage.

At the Kansai Rosai Hospital in nearby Amagasaki, many patients are experiencing breathing difficulties at night. Doctors call the symptom common among people suffering delayed stress syndrome.

"The people think we'll have another big quake," taxi driver Yoshikazu Morimoto said. "Most are very afraid another big one will come. Many people are leaving, and many of them have lost their jobs" because businesses were destroyed.

Frustration about the government's relief operation boiled

Kennedy matriarch passes away at 104

The Associated Press

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. - Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy, matriarch of the Kennedy clan, whose faith and quiet strength saw one of America's most prominent families through three generations of political triumphs and personal tragedies, died Sunday. She was 104.

Kennedy had used a wheelchair since suffering a stroke in April 1984.

Kennedy lived her life in the public eye, always in a supporting role: daughter of a congressman, wife of an ambassador, mother of a president and two U.S. senators. For her, family was all.

She once described her life as a series of "agonies and ecstasies." The exhilaration of political success and the horror of violent death ran like twin threads through her long life.

Four of her nine children were killed in their prime - two in plane crashes, two by assassins' bullets. One daughter was retarded, and a grandson died of a drug overdose.

She was a devout Roman Catholic, and her church helped her bear her sorrows. After President John F. Kennedy's assassination in 1963, she said, "I've learned to be brave and put my faith in the will of God."

"No matter what, God wants us to be happy. He doesn't want us to be sad. Birds sing after a storm. Why shouldn't we?" she said in a 1983 interview.

Kennedy knew kings, queens, presidents and popes. She spent her summers on Cape Cod and her winters in Palm Beach, Fla. She was a tireless worker for her sons' election campaigns in her middle years and continued to make public appearances until late in life - maintaining her erect bearing and careful grooming.

But she was rarely seen in public after April 1984, when she suffered a stroke.

At celebrations marking her 100th birthday, her only surviving son, U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, told a crowd of nearly 400 people, "In the chaos of our household, she was the quiet at the center of the storm, the anchor of our family, the safe harbor to which we always came."

Weather shouldn't be blamed on city

The sky is falling! The sky is falling! Well, maybe not, but snow has once again fallen on the fair city of Bowling Green. And the new snow brings renewed comments about the city's snow plowing policy -- or lack thereof.

When the weather gets bad, transportation can also get rough with the roads becoming slippery with ice, so slippery that driving over the speed of 30 miles per hour around the city streets almost guarantees an accident. Lack of salt, which is good in a person's diet, is frustrating when it comes to dealing with the roads. When there is ice everywhere, you don't care if the salt can cause long-term damage to your car, you just want the salt on the ground so the ice will melt.

When the snowplows come, you suddenly see snow piled up in the middle of the road in mountains twice the size of your car. It's rumored that left turns just aren't possible from December through February.

Then again, where are they supposed to put all that snow?

Complaints also fly that say roadside parking is nonexistent.

Actually, it's just parking that's nonexistent. Unfortunately, that's winter in Northwest Ohio. Short of erecting a bubble dome over the city, there's really nothing the Bowling Green administrators can do about it.

They plow and they plow and they plow. And they salt and they salt and they salt. But, as is the way of things during winter, it snows and it snows and it snows.

The plow drivers are not to blame. They are doing their best to keep our roads free of hazard. After all, they too have families that have to venture out on the treacherous roadways.

So the next time you see an icy roadway, don't complain. Start a junior plowman's club. Get the kids going early. Pick up a shovel and take some initiative.

Well, at least wave and say hello, because they're doing a service for you. How many students do you know that would be willing to get up at 4:00 a.m. and plow for a couple of hours?

Probably not too many.

So remember: the next time the roads are slippery, don't blame the plowmen.

Return of the Lizard King

RUSTUM KOZAIN

Christmas break sprung its usual journalistic boon on me. I evaded the throng of Bowling Green and jetted south. No, further than the Miami maelstrom -- as your typical revolutionary South African, I was ecstatic to land in La Habana. Si, I was in Cuba to interview Fidel Castro but, unfortunately, he was never available.

Because of my status as a resident in the land of the running dogs of capitalist-imperialism, I was of course confined to the grounds of Fidel's hacienda. Wandering around these grounds is when I happened onto history's wry sense of humor.

One night, I stumbled onto a little bungalow in the back of the big garden. A blue glow and faint rock music emanated from within. Since it was getting dark, however, I had to postpone my investigation, and turned back to house and dinner. In fumbling Spanglish, I asked the butler who lived in the bungalow. I was confounded when he spluttered something about a blizzard thing.

The next morning, a chat with Fidel still not forthcoming, I grabbed myself some beers and set off to investigate the bungalow.

Survana's song, Blithium, was blaring from the TV and there was no answer to my repeated knocking. Eventually, I inched through the door...

My God! I thought, my journa-

"That's Afrikaans," I said, "a Dutch derivative. I'm from South Africa."

Jim jumped in response: "Hey yeah! Fidel was there recently. Wasn't it just the coolest thing. Wasn't that beautiful when Fidel hugged Yasser? Yeah, I just felt a surge of peace and goodwill breaking through to the other side. Yeah, saw it all on TV. Fidel's got a satellite dish you know. We get everything, MTV, CNN. This new stuff is just crazy, hey!"

I was still trying to find my feet. Bewildered still, I said: "But Jim, you don't understand. The whole world thinks you're...you know, and how, I mean, I just don't understand."

"Oh, business. You see, I figured that, with the Hendrix affair -- man, what a way to go -- f but I figured, his sales went up within a year, why don't I pull a stunt, disappear, you know what I mean. Think of the sales, royalties. Now I can have my chicken in private and watch MTV."

"But why has no one found you out yet?"

"You see, they all go in search of the Lizard King. It don't work that way. For is it not written only those who do not seek the Lizard King, shall find him?"

"I see," I said.

"Hey, then just ride the storm," he chuckled. "So I came to Cuba. In return for Fidel's hospitality, I work the AIDS-circuit. Mostly rock artists, you know. Sheesh, you should see those camps man. But, hey, I do workshops in guitar, drum, bass and performance. Starting one on film, after Christmas. Used to give Fidel lessons himself, but that's all changed now."

"Why is that?" I asked. At this, Jim was visibly angered. He grabbed a piece of chicken, tore at it and pointed at the TV. MTV was showing a Survana Special.

"That damn kid, man! I can't stand his whining and moping. That damn red hair and acting all insecure. So foolish man. I, I was connected man, to the earth and stuff, you know," Jim snarled. He went on.

"That Generation Blech stuff. Man, that what'sname -- Blurt Scovain? His records are outselling mine and he's just a kid and hey," Jim lowered his voice to a whisper, "you know what, Blurt pulled a stunt. Yeah, a messy one, confused circumstantial stuff and all that, but a stunt."

"No wait. Not again. This can't be," I protested.

"Yeah, you bet. He's here man! I've seen him. Blurt's alive!" Jim cried. "That's why Fidel can't see you. He's taking guitar lessons with Blurt now..."

Next week: meeting Mr. Generation Blech

Peiffer misses point in train wreck column

It's hard to tell whether Joe Peiffer's January 20th column is intended to have a serious message about personal responsibility or just to be "funny." Whichever, it stunningly misses the point of the discussions between the city and Conrail.

If Peiffer stupidly decides to race a train to an intersection, no crossing gate in the world will save him. That, however, is not what a crossing gate is intended to prevent.

Considering two other cases: first, Peiffer, driving cautiously on a snowy morning, hears an approaching whistle, hits black ice, and slides into the path of a train that's only 50 yards away. Here Peiffer is being prudent, he knows the train is coming, he takes corrective action -- and is killed anyhow. A crossing gate might have saved him. One of last year's accidents was exactly like this.

Second, Peiffer, again driving carefully, hears a train coming and has to decide whether to cross. He has what looks like a safe distance between him and the train, but feels his car will stall on the tracks. The train is moving faster than he thought, perhaps his seatbelt jams or he panics -- again, Peiffer is killed. A crossing gate could not keep him from making the wrong (but reasonable) decision, but it could stop him outside the intersection. This is what may have happened in the most recent accident.

Crossing gates, in the setting of busy residential streets in a college town, are not analogous to train resistant suits. They are analogous to fire extinguishers in one's kitchen or insurance policies on one's life. Thus, they are examples of the very prudence Peiffer allegedly celebrates. To imply otherwise in the cases I have cited is, cruelly and unjustly, to blame the victims.

Column should have thought of victims

After reading Joe Peiffer's January 20th column I would like The News to consider the following. The woman who was killed recently by a train in Bowling Green was the wife of a graduate student in our department.

I was one of the ones who looked for him that day to tell him the sad news. It was very difficult to see a person find out that his wife had been killed. He cried and had a hard time controlling himself. He got help from his friends in China and from the international office of the University, but he still could not be left alone for a few days.

His grief was such that it was dangerous from him to be alone.

It seems that his wife did look both ways, but that her car stalled. Whatever the reason for her death, she and her family should be treated with respect. I hope that her husband or family never sees your column. I hope that her friends never see that column. It might be best if The News apologized for the column.

Clinton has made many contributions

The BGSU College Democrats would like to take offense with Larry Hannan's contention in his January 17th column that "the president's performance over the last two years leaves a lot to be desired."

Clinton has proposed and will fight for a "Middle Class Bill of Rights." This proposal calls for a $500 tax credit for each child 12 for families with an annual income under $75,000. It also makes college tuition deductible up to $10,000 for families earning under $120,000.

Clinton has aggressively addressed the federal budget deficit, cutting it by almost $400 billion in the last years of the Bush presidency to $220 billion in 1994. It is projected to fall to $167.1 billion in 1995.

Americorps, a program that allows college students to pay back student loans through community service, was created. Americorps is already bigger than the peace corps was at its peak.

A crime bill was passed that will add up to 100,000 additional police officers to our nation's streets. The bill will also include a ban on dangerous semiautomatic assault weapons.

The economy has boomed under President Clinton. Unemployment is at 5.6 percent. This is the lowest rate of unemployment since 1990. While unemployment has fallen, inflation has held steady at a low 2.7 percent. Furthermore 4 million new jobs have been created in the United States since President Clinton was inaugurated.

President Clinton's accomplishments clearly speak for themselves.

University theater passes available

Cost-saving theater passes are available for University stage productions at Joe E. Brown and Eva Marie Saint theaters.

The University pass can be used to pay for a single ticket at any Joe E. Brown or Eva Marie Saint theater production. To use the pass, simply show it at the theater box office and it will be honored as long as tickets are available for a given performance.

The Eva Marie Saint Theater will be the site of two productions, "Children of a Lesser God" on March 3 and 4 at 8 p.m. and "Dancing at Lughnasa" at 8 p.m. on March 8-11 and 2 p.m. on March 12.

Joe E. Brown will be the site for the annual children's theater productions by the Treehouse Troup. This year the company will present "Tales from the Brothers Grimm" and "The Pinballs" at 7:30 p.m. on March 31 and April 1.

Passes are $14 for adults and $9 for students and senior citizens. The passes are on sale in the Theater Department office in 322 South Hall. For more information, call the department at 372-2222.

Service organizations rock for David's House

When Blitzen takes the stage at Mark's Pizza Pub at 9 p.m. Monday night, patrons can be assured that their $5 cover charge will go to the pockets of someone other than a brewing conglomerate.

What began as a pledge class project for service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega three years ago has grown into a major fund raiser for David's House, a provider of emergency housing assistance and food for people diagnosed with HIV or AIDS. Co-sponsored this year by Omega Phi Alpha service sorority, the organizations hope their combined efforts will exceed the results of the past two years.

The money from the one-night event will be used by David's House to help support its rapidly-expanding organization.

Singer charged with harassment

MELBOURNE, Australia -- Courtney Love is up on charges of harassing people aboard an airplane down under.

Police say she abused and intimidated the crew and passengers on a 90-minute Qantas Airways flight from Brisbane to Melbourne.

The pilot radioed ahead and police boarded the plane when it landed, interviewed Love and charged her with offensive behavior on an aircraft, police said Sunday.

Love, whose band Hole is touring Australia, was freed on bail so she could perform in Melbourne later Saturday. The singer, the widow of grunge rock star Kurt Cobain, was scheduled in court Monday.

Country entertaining, senator may be dating

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- Date? What date?

Lorrie Morgan and Sen. Fred Thompson weren't giving away any secrets when they waltzed into the inaugural ball together Saturday night.

"You'll have to ask my senator about that," the country singer said when asked if they've been dating.

Said he: "I'm not going to talk about that tonight."

It was easy to tell who Gov. Don Sundquist was happiest to see: "Lorrie Morgan is here. And she has a guest," the Republican told the gathering.

Thompson, the lawyer-actor just sent up to Congress to represent Tennessee, appeared in "The Hunt for Red October" and "In the Line of Fire." Morgan's songs include "Watch Me" and "What Part of No."

Columnist wins award

LAWRENCE, Kan. -- Ellen Goodman's done it again.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist will take home yet another award on Feb. 10 when she receives the William Allen White Foundation citation.

It's given annually to a journalist mirroring White's "service to his profession and his community."

Recipients include CNN broadcaster Bernard Shaw; columnist George Will; The Associated Press' President Louis D. Boccia; "McNeill-Lehrer NewsHour" correspondent Charlayne Hunter-Gault; and Knight-Ridder Inc. executive James K. Batten.

Goodman's Boston Globe column is syndicated in more than 440 U.S. newspapers.

New addition to Montel William's family

NEW YORK -- Montel Williams and his wife have a new baby, and she doesn't look too much like her Dad.

Grace Williams gave birth to 6-pound Wynter Grace Williams on Saturday, publicist Ron Santo said.

Wynter's big brother, Montel II, was born 16 months ago.

The bald TV talk show host says the child has his wife's lips and his eyes. His thankful wife pointed out that she's got her hair.

Forrest Gump wins three Golden Globes

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. -- The quirky Tom Hanks box-office smash "Forrest Gump" topped Quentin Tarantino's "Pulp Fiction" in the 52nd Golden Globe Awards, often a bellwether for the Oscars.

"Gump," the saga of a (very) simple country boy, won best dramatic picture; Hanks won best dramatic actor and Robert Zemeckis was best director.

"Pulp Fiction," a dark gangster film that some have criticized as too violent, picked up an award for best screenplay, by writer-director Tarantino.

ACROSS THE STATE

Lazarus headquarters will leave Cincinnati

CINCINNATI -- A Lazarus plan to move its headquarters to Atlanta came as a surprise because its parent company, Federated Department Stores Inc., wanted it that way, the city economic development director said.

"Why would Federated want to tell us? This was an inside business decision where the motivation was to save dollars," Andis Udris told The Cincinnati Enquirer in a story published on Sunday. "They didn't want to get into negotiations and lobbying by the city or state."

But some Council members said city officials should have known that something was going on. Federated announced on Friday that Lazarus will merge with the Rich's Goldsmith division and move its headquarters to Atlanta. It means a loss of 700 white-collar jobs in Cincinnati and throws into question plans for a new Lazarus downtown.

The consolidation will save the company $27 million a year and was done to help Federated pay for its $4.1 billion acquisition of R.H. Macy & Co. last month.

Councilman Tom Luken accused City Manager John Shirey of being "incapable of dealing with current events."

Shirey has been passive on issues, including negotiations with the baseball team, the Reds, for a new stadium lease, Luken said.

"This is another one of these in a long line of failures we have in the area of retaining or obtaining business," Luken said. "Big business has been running the city of Cincinnati since [Mayor Roxanne] Qualls and Shirey took over."

The newspaper said Shirey could not be reached for comment. His home telephone number is unpublished and his office phone went unanswered on Sunday.

Qualls told the newspaper that city officials should have known enough about market trends to ask questions about the potential for Lazarus to leave.

She said she would ask Shirey on Monday to collect more in-depth information so the city can determine what jobs are most vulnerable and make sure they stay.

In an interview on Sunday with The Associated Press, Qualls said the city has job-retention programs, but "they're not as focused as they need to be."

She said the city is not at fault for the Lazarus move.

"This was, as Federated made very clear, strictly a business decision," she said. "Even if the city had known this was in the works -- nothing could have changed the decision."

Council member Phil Heimlich said council was to blame for not finalizing a deal that would have locked Lazarus into building a new store downtown.

Others, including the mayor and Council member Bobbie Sterne, said Lazarus dragged out the negotiations.

BG hockey stays on top in CCHA

Falcon Tom Glantz face off against a Michigan State Spartan during the Falcons' 6-4 victory on Saturday. With the win, BG remains on top in the CCHA

Pat Murphy
The BG News

These Falcons are for real. They are not the myth that started out 6-0-1 last season, ranked as high as third in the national polls only to finish in sixth place in the conference, going 0-5-2 against Michigan State and Michigan.

The 1994-95 edition of BG hockey can come back from a wrenching 4-3 overtime loss to Michigan to convincingly down Michigan State 6-4 the following night.

BG, now 16-7-1 overall and first in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association at 13-4-1, scored three times in the third period to hand MSU its second loss at the Ice Arena this year and leave Spartan head coach Ron Mason upset with his team.

"I am pretty disgusted with the third period," Mason said.

Mason's disgust began with the hounding Falcon forechecking. Jason Clark pinned a Spartan defender on the boards and stole the puck. He passed to an oncoming Mike Johnson, who flipped a backhand through the crevice between MSU goalie Mike Buzak and the post for his 13th goal of the season.

The Brown and Orange held a one-goal lead for 12 minutes until BG went on the power play, thanks to a check after the whistle by MSU center Anson Carter on Matt Eldred.

"Coach had me in his office and said if you get hit, get his number and get him with a clean shot," Eldred said.

BG converted the opportunity with Chad Ackerman's second goal of the game and the season. Ackerman took a pass from Brett Punchard and fired a shot, the puck was deflected several times before flopping over Buzak's shoulder.

"There were a lot of bouncing pucks out there, and those are the ones that won it," Mason said.

"In big games you never know where goals are going to come from," BG head coach Buddy Powers added.

For the second time this year the Falcon defense held the league's third best offense below its five-goal-per-game average. The Spartan top guns, Carter, Steve Guolla, Rem Murray and Steve Suk were held to two assists and no goals.

"It was a solid effort from everyone. Ackerman had a real good game," Eldred said.

The solid defensive effort carried over from Friday's game against Michigan, where BG held the Wolverines to four goals instead of their usual six. They didn't allow the UM forwards to roam around the Falcon end like they did in the 7-3 Wolverine win earlier this year.

Punchard scored two goals and assisted on Brian Holzinger's 26th goal of the season as the Falcons tied the score 3-3 heading into the third period.

"Coach told me to shoot the puck in practice. I did that a couple of times. Things were just going my way," Punchard said.

"I felt we battled as hard as we can battle."

At 1:57 of overtime, Wolverine Mike Legg deflected Peter Bourke's shot past BG goalie Will Clarke and gave UM the victory.

"I felt we battled as hard as we can battle. I don't think they left much in the tank," Powers said.

Coach K sits out season

The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. - Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski, recovering from back surgery, will not coach again this season.

Athletic director Tom Butters said Sunday the 47-year-old coach will return to for the 1995-96 season.

Physicians, university officials and Krzyzewski agreed that to rush his recovery and rehabilitation from surgery and exhaustion would not be in the best interests of the coach or the school.

Krzyzewski underwent back surgery on Oct. 22 for a displaced disc. Instead of taking the standard time off for rehabilitation, he went back to work in preparation for the season in about two weeks.

Two days after the Blue Devils lost their Atlantic Coast Conference season opener to Clemson, Krzyzewski complained of exhaustion and was admitted to Duke University Hospital on Jan. 6.

On Jan. 10, Krzyzewski was released from the hospital with instructions not to have any contact with the basketball team or any other administrative responsibilities. Originally, the school said he would not return for several weeks.

When Krzyzewski left, the Blue Devils were 9-3. The team, now under the direction of assistant coach Pete Gaudet, has lost six straight games, its longest losing streak in 56 years. Gaudet has coached five of them.

Krzyzewski, Duke's all-time winningest coach, met with the players and coaching staff Sunday afternoon to inform them of the decision.

"Coach K is a Duke treasure and we want to take care of our treasures," Duke president Nan Keohane said Sunday.

Toledo shocks men's squad

Kline-Ruminski's last-second shot misses mark

Marty Fuller
The BG News

TOLEDO -- A last-second three-point shot by BG center Shane Kline-Ruminski didn't bounce the Falcons' way and Toledo escaped an overtime period with a 71-68 upset victory in Savage Hall on Saturday.

With 5.8 seconds left in the contest and BG trailing by three, Matt Otto inbounded the ball to Kline-Ruminski who was standing behind the three point arc. Kline-Ruminski gathered in the pass, took a quick glance of the floor and found himself surprisingly left alone.

"I had a good look at it," Kline-Ruminski said. "I'm not sure I should have taken it, but I was open. It was a decision I made. I saw it go in and out; it's a hard feeling to describe."

Before his potential game tying three-pointer took flight, Kline-Ruminski had been unstoppable. He took control in the paint and used the Rockets for 22 points on a 10-of-14 shooting performance.

Falcon forward Floyd Miller backed up Kline-Ruminski's charge down low with 12 points and 8 rebounds.

"Our attack was inside. We went to our big guys all night long. Ruminski and Miller went to the basket hard, maybe we didn't get enough guys going to the basket -- I don't know," BG head coach Jim Larranaga said.

"We wanted to run people at him [Ruminski] and force him to pass the ball," Toledo head coach Larry Gipson said. "He did an excellent job of reading our defense. I think he can score one-on-one against almost anybody in this league." Despite the inside attack, the Falcons couldn't draw the fouls. BG went to the free-throw stripe only four times.

buckets punctuated with a Scoop Williams dunk to end the half. Toledo led at the break, 36-27.

The Falcons struggled on both sides of the court in the first half. The offense connected on just one of eight three-point attempts while the defense was slow to pickup screens. "In the first half John Defoe -- I don't know who was covering him -- came off a screen so wide open right near the bench, he could have stopped, had a cup of coffee, sighted the target again and still been wide open. I think they did good a job, we just needed to do a better job," Larranaga said.

Antonio Daniels contributed 11 points while James Cerisier dropped in 8 for the Falcons, who shot .30 in the second half.

They were outshined, however, by Toledo's Williams, Krahulik and Caig Thames. Williams tallied 14, Krahulik had 15, and Thames finished up with 11 points.

BG women fall in OT

Scott Brown
The BG News

Given the choice between focusing on Mimi Olson outside or Kim D'Angelo inside, Bowling Green made the wrong choice Saturday against Toledo.

One gets the feeling, however, that either choice would have been incorrect.

Toledo got a career-best 36 points out of Olson Saturday, but a pair of key rebound baskets by D'Angelo in overtime made the difference. The Rockets escaped Anderson Arena with a thrilling 104-96 overtime win.

Bowling Green drops to 4-10 overall, 2-4 in the Mid-American Conference. Toledo is now 10-5 and 4-2.

Despite Jenny Kulics' driving layup with 4.7 seconds left in regulation to send it to overtime, the Rockets controlled the extra session from the outset. The Falcons were forced to align their defense around Olson, who scored 18 points in the last nine minutes of regulation. It was the other Rockets who stepped up to deliver the death blows.

Denise Pickenpaugh hit a key three-pointer a minute into the extra session, and a pair of put-back baskets by D'Angelo gave the Rockets a seven-point cushion from which the Falcons would not recover.

"I think a lot of that probably came from Mimi making a lot of three-point shots, and Denise hit a couple of shots," Toledo coach Bill Fennelly explained. "The post player's man is helping out outside, and then we have a free lane to the basket to get a rebound."

With the score tied at 88 a minute into overtime, Toledo's Pickenpaugh provided the shot of the game. She drained a three-pointer to put the Rockets up for good.

"We set a screen inside, but they fought through it," Pickenpaugh said. "No one was guarding me, so I dribbled back a couple of steps and took the shot."

Pickenpaugh was not even expected to play in the game until just before game time. She had missed the previous three games with a stress fracture in her left foot.

"Denise is the kind of player that plays in big games," Fennelly said. "You saw tonight what she can do for us. She hit some big shots for us. She plays big in big games."

Bowling Green turned the ball over four of the first seven times they touched it in the extra session. They fell behind by as many as eight. They closed within three with 25 seconds left, but never seriously threatened.

"When you do the little things, you have to keep doing those in a big game," Bowling Green coach Jaci Clark said.

BG starts league play at disappointing pace

TOLEDO -- While Bowling Green's 71-68 loss to Toledo Saturday night only marked the one-third point of their Mid-American Conference schedule, some disheartening signs have already started to show.

The loss dropped the Falcons' conference record to 3-3, two games behind co-leaders Miami and Ohio. Granted, this is no real reason to be alarmed with 12 MAC games left to be played. But it's the way that these games were lost that worries me a little bit.

The Falcons opened the MAC season in fine fashion with a very convincing 86-70 victory over Western Michigan. At times during that game the Falcons looked unstoppable.

A few days later, however, the Falcons were stopped by a Kent State team that was physically outmanned at every position. The difference in that 73-69 loss was that the Golden Flashes just plain out-wanted the game more. The same scenario had haunted the Falcons in two out of three games against KSU last season.

"I would have hoped that we would have learned our lesson last year against them," Shane Kline-Ruminski said after the loss. "Unfortunately, I guess we didn't. We just thought we could show up and win and obviously we can't do that."

As frustrating and hard to believe as it is -- especially against their arch-enemy Toledo Rockets -- that's exactly what the Falcons did Saturday night.

Trailing 30-27 with a minute remaining in the first half, the Falcons gave up three uncontested baskets to UT and suddenly found themselves down by nine.

"If you had to rate our effort in the first half in relationship to Toledo's, theirs was far superior," BG head coach Jim Larranaga said. "I thought we had [the emotion] Wednesday night, but for some reason we didn't have it [Saturday]."

"We just didn't have the emotion," Kline-Ruminski uttered again. "It's something that we have to work on."

Emotion isn't something that should have to be "worked on," especially when playing your oldest and most hated rival.

If the Falcons, picked to finish second in the MAC pre-season media poll, can't muster up enough emotion to beat a struggling Toledo squad, they're probably headed for a middle-of-the-MAC finish reminiscent of the talent-laden teams of the early 1990s.

A widely accepted theory says that in order to be a championship caliber team you have to win all of your home games and split the road matchups -- where the Falcons have dropped their first three.

The kicker is that the Falcons have generally been up to the task emotionally during their home games at Anderson Arena where they have won 16 straight dating back to last season.

If the Falcons continue to win at home, and split their remaining six road games they will end the regular season at 18-8, including another 12-6 finish in league play.

With a weak non-conference schedule which included perennial powder puffs Defiance and Tiffin, the Falcons will probably need to notch a 20-win season to have any chance at post season play -- unless of course they win the MAC Tournament which guarantees a trip to the Big Dance.
